

Matris tools for rear shocks

Italian suspension specialist Matris has developed two "professional and easy to use" tools, PG19 and T08. The PG19 is a precision nitrogen charger tool consisting of two units for adjusting the gas pressure inside shock or fork cartridges. PG19.1 is a valve unit, supplied with a flexible hose, with connection for shock absorbers equipped with a gas valve. PG19.2 is a needle holder unit supplied with two interchangeable needles for shock absorbers with a silicone valve. The T08 length gauge enables quick and easy adjustment of the length of a rear shock.

Bihir CEO Christophe Piron demonstrated their ability to distribute our products in France and Belgium, and we are more than happy to expand our collaboration to Belgium.

Hirotake Arai and current CEO of Arai Helmets Ltd., said: "We are very pleased to have found an agreement with Bihir to distribute our helmets in Germany. The Bihir team has clearly took over at Bihir in March this year said: "We are very honoured to have the opportunity to distribute Arai products in Germany. Arai has a fantastic range of products with a safety reputation second to none. Our partnership with Arai in France and Belgium has been extremely successful and we are thrilled to expand it into Germany." The Arai story is the stuff of legends, with Hirotake Arai starting out as a hatmaker in 1926 and then starting to make motorcycle safety helmets in 1950. Bell helmets are an equally storied brand, having been started by Roy Richter in the garage of a southern Californian Speed Shop in 1954. Bihir's deal with Bell sees them becoming the exclusive distributor for Germany and Austria and takes the number of European markets in which Bihir represents Bell to 12, including France and Spain. Christophe Piron commented: "We are very excited about starting the
